
FORDHAM LAW REVIEW

Prompt for the 2016 Optional Personal Statement

The Fordham Law Review publishes around 3500 pages of legal scholarship each year, including many pages of student written Notes. In the United States, the Fordham Law Review is the ninth most cited law review in other legal journals and the seventh most cited law review in judicial decisions, according to a recent study by Washington & Lee University.

2L Staff Members are critical to the success of the Law Review. They contribute to legal scholarship by writing student Notes and are key to the Law Review's editorial process. Upon publishing a Note, 2L Staff Members are eligible to run for the Law Review's Editorial Board.

The Fordham Law Review strives to maintain its leadership in American legal scholarship as well as within the Fordham Law School community. Excellent legal scholarship and leadership require a range of skills, perspectives, and thought. Thus, we are committed to staffing the journal with students from backgrounds that have been traditionally underrepresented in the legal community. We are looking for staffers that will bring diverse and unique perspectives to the work that we do. Please describe, in 500 words or less, how your personal experiences and background would help the Fordham Law Review accomplish these goals.

You may begin working on your Statement immediately. However, please note that you must submit your Statement in accordance with the 2016 Unified Writing Competition Rules. With questions, please reach out to:

Timothy Deal
Executive Notes Editor
Fordham Law Review, Volume 85
FordhamLRevENE@fordham.edu